

Railroad Strike Decision To Be Known In Week

Union Meetings in Chicago Will Announce Result of Nation-Wide Vote on New Wage Propositions

Ballo's Favor Walk-Out

Leaders Will Urge Caution at Present and May Ask Further Negotiations

Special Dispatch to The Tribune
CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—Whether or not the country must face a general railroad strike this autumn is expected to be decided at two important meetings of employees, representatives which will be held here next week.

On Sunday representatives of 500,000 shopmen will meet to determine what action should be taken in regard to the wage cut and changes in working rules, which went into effect on July 1. A country-wide ballot, taken some time ago, is said to have resulted overwhelmingly in favor of a strike. The result of the vote will be announced at the meeting, which will be presided over by B. M. Jewell, president of the railroad employees' department of the American Federation of Labor.

Trainmen Favor Strike
On September 22 the heads of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Order of Railway Conductors, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, Switchmen's Union of North America and the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen will meet here to announce the result of a ballot now being taken by these organizations.

Reports from Buffalo, N. Y., last night said that 70 per cent of the trainmen have voted and that the vote so far is about 95 per cent in favor of a strike.

The Irish Players Present "The White-Headed Boy" at Henry Miller's Theater

The Irish Players Present "The White-Headed Boy" at Henry Miller's Theater.

The players from the Abbey Theater returned last night and added to the sum of our happiness by telling us about the Geoghegan and the Duffy families, amusing residents of Ballygobbin, in the South of Ireland. Under Mr. Dillingham's suave auspices they acted "The White-Headed Boy" by Lennox Robinson, proving it to be a joyous anecdote of humble life among the turbulent tribesmen and a keen study of their more obvious weaknesses and virtues.

Several of the players of former visits were in the cast—Arthur Sinclair, Sydney Morgan and J. A. O'Rourke—and, aided by capable others, they gave the natural and racy performance their tradition has led us to expect.

The music of the English tongue on Irish lips was almost as sweet in "The White-Headed Boy" as it was when the players were engaged seasons ago in the utterance of the melodies of Synge and Yeats.

The white-headed boy of Mr. Robinson's little tale was the pet child of the Widow Geoghegan. He was good-looking and full of Irish charm, and to him went all the advantages possible in a large and somewhat impetuous family. They sent him to Dublin to learn to be a doctor, handicapping thereby the other members of the household, three daughters and two sons.

As the play began the Geoghegans, excepting the widow, had become fed up with sacrificing themselves for the favorite, and when the young man was discovered to be failing regularly in his examinations, and to be wearing spats, and to be betting upon the horse races, they revolted. He was assigned to go to Canada, there to begin life anew.

It was here that Mr. Sinclair intervened, as John Duffy, a thrifty and tricky parent of Della Duffy, the betrothed of Denis, the white-headed boy. Denis's expedition to Canada involved the breaking of his engagement to Della, a humiliation not to be borne by the proud Duffy, who was chairman of the Rural District Council and as good as any Geoghegan that ever lived.

His indignation pugnacity developed into a threat to have the law on the Geoghegans to bring an action for a thousand pounds, and he stormed around the Geoghegan living room, frightening the outfit with the solemnity of his vengeance. Some financial and romantic bargaining between him and an artful aunt (Miss Maire O'Neill) led him to withdraw his threatened retribution.

At the end Denis and Della slipped away and were married, thus upsetting all the arrangements, and resulting in a great and comic turmoil. The bridegroom refused further to accept favors.

Babies Have a Better Chance—Now. Wonderful Work Here.

There is one department in the New York City Health Service that, in my opinion, gets but a small part of the attention and praise it deserves.

Under the direction of that remarkable woman, Dr. S. Josephine Baker, the Bureau of Child Hygiene is setting a standard that the world can well afford to watch and follow.

My attention was called to the fact that for the first eight months of this year the mortality rate among babies under one year of age has been 75 in each 1,000. To appreciate the significance of this you need only compare this figure with that of 1907, when 144 out of each 1,000 failed to survive the first year.

This department was organized in 1908 with Doctor Baker as its head. It was the first of its kind in this country. Since that time 35 States have taken up the work and others are preparing to follow New York's lead.

Last year the nurses of Doctor Baker's department visited 60,000 mothers and babies. They actually came in personal contact with these little ones and gave their mothers individual instruction.

In actual figures this department can point to 72,747 children now living who owe their lives to its efforts. To this must be added the cumulative value of the work on the minds of future mothers.

One fact that has usually been overlooked in connection with this work is that the Bureau of Child Hygiene not only carries the babies through the first year, but exerts a benign influence on the following years. During the last ten years there has been a decrease in the infant mortality rate of 39 per cent, as compared with the previous five years. In the group of children under five years of age there has been a decrease in the mortality rate of 48 per cent, for the comparable period. Starting with a good foundation, they grow stronger as they grow older.

Doctor Baker classifies the work under three general heads: Sanitation, Pasteurized Milk, Individual Education.

50c Margin Accounting Asked in Coal Inquiry

Mackay Committee Adjourns Until Oct. 6 for Explanation of Mine-Consumer Gap

The Mackay investigating committee resumed its hearings in Newark yesterday into the coal situation in Hudson County, N. J. The principal question raised was how coal sales companies account for a 50-cent margin a ton between mines and retailers. This will be considered again at the next hearing of the committee on October 6.

Samuel G. Memory, Newark agent of the Lackawanna Railroad, objected to the charge being called "a 50-cent profit," saying it had been referred to as such in newspapers.

When asked what part of it was profit, the witness expressed himself as being unable to say. He was instructed to be prepared to give this information at the next hearing.

Legal action that was threatened against the Hudson Trust Company, of Hoboken, because certain records were not furnished will not be taken. Senator Mackay expressed himself as being satisfied with the situation in regard to this matter.

New Tarkington Play for Kelly

Gregory Kelly and Ruth Gordon, who is Mrs. Kelly at home, are to have the leading roles in "Bristol Glass," a new comedy by Booth Tarkington, which George Tyler will produce this autumn. Gregory Kelly is now playing the dry-witted brother of the bromide lady in "Dulcy." He is one of the most gifted of the young American comedians. The couple appeared together in "Seventeen" and "Clarence."
